Classic Poetry Series

Charles Bukowski

- poems -

Publication Date:

2004

Publisher:

PoemHunter.Com - The World's Poetry Archive

16-bit Intel 8088 chip

with an Apple Macintosh you can't run Radio Shack programs in its disc drive. nor can a Commodore 64 drive read a file you have created on an ÍBM Personal Computer. both Kaypro and Osborne computers use the CP/M operating system but can't read each other's handwriting for they format (write on) discs in different ways. the Tandy 2000 runs MS-DOS but can't use most programs produced for the IBM Personal Computer unless certain bits and bytes are altered but the wind still blows over Savannah and in the Spring the turkey buzzard struts and flounces before his hens.

40,000

at the track today, Father's Day, each paid admission was entitled to a wallet and each contained a little surprise.

8 Count

from my bed I watch 3 birds on a telephone wire. one flies off. then another. one is left, then it too is gone. my typewriter is tombstone still. and I am reduced to bird watching.
just thought I'd let you
know,
fucker.

A Challenge To The Dark

shot in the eye shot in the brain shot in the ass shot like a flower in the dance

A Following

the phone rang at 1:30 a.m. and it was a man from Denver:

A Man Charles Bukowski www.PoemHunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

A Radio With Guts

it was on the 2nd floor on Coronado Street I used to get drunk and throw the radio through the window while it was playing, and, of course, it would break the glass in the window and the radio would sit there on the roof still playing and I'd tell my woman, " Ah, what a marvelous radio! " the next morning I'd take the window off the hinges and carry it down the street to the glass man who would put in another pane. I kept throwing that radio through the window each time I got drunk and it would sit there on the roof still playinga magic radio a radio with guts, and each morning I'd take the window back to the glass man. I don't remember how it ended exactly though I do remember we finally moved out. there was a woman downstairs who worked in the garden in her bathing suit, she really dug with that trowel and she put her behind up in the air and I used to sit in the window and watch the sun shine all over that thing while the music played.

a smile to remember

we had goldfish and they circled around and around in the bowl on the table near the heavy drapes covering the picture window and my mother, always smiling, wanting us all to be happy, told me, "be happy Henry!" and she was right: it's better to be happy if you can but my father continued to beat her and me several times a week while raging inside his 6-foot-two frame because he couldn't understand what was attacking him from within.

my mother, poor fish, wanting to be happy, beaten two or three times a week, telling me to be happy: "Henry, smile! why don't you ever smile?"

and then she would smile, to show me how, and it was the saddest smile I ever saw one day the goldfish died, all five of them, they floated on the water, on their sides, their eyes still open, and when my father got home he threw them to the cat there on the kitchen floor and we watched as my mother smiled

Alone With Everybody

the flesh covers the bone and they put a mind in there and sometimes a soul, and the women break vases against the walls and the men drink too much and nobody finds the one but keep looking crawling in and out of beds. flesh covers the bone and the flesh searches for more than flesh.

there's no chance at all: we are all trapped by a singular fate.

nobody ever finds the one.

the city dumps fill the junkyards fill the madhouses fill the hospitals fill the graveyards fill nothing else fills.

Anonymous submission.

An Almost Made Up Poem

I see you drinking at a fountain with tiny blue hands, no, your hands are not tiny they are small, and the fountain is in France where you wrote me that last letter and I answered and never heard from you again. you used to write insane poems about ANGELS AND GOD, all in upper case, and you knew famous artists and most of them were your lovers, and I wrote back, it' all right, go ahead, enter their lives, I' not jealous because we' never met. we got close once in New Orleans, one half block, but never met, never touched, so you went with the famous and wrote about the famous, and, of course, what you found out is that the famous are worried about their fame – – not the beautiful young girl in bed with them, who gives them that, and then awakens in the morning to write upper case poems about ANGELS AND GOD. we know God is dead, they' told us, but listening to you I wasn' sure. maybe it was the upper case. you were one of the best female poets and I told the publishers, editors, " her, print her, she' mad but she' magic. there' no lie in her fire." I loved you like a man loves a woman he never touches, only writes to, keeps little photographs of. I would have loved you more if I had sat in a small room rolling a cigarette and listened to you piss in the bathroom, but that didn' happen. your letters got sadder. your lovers betrayed you. kid, I wrote back, all lovers betray. it didn' help. you said you had a crying bench and it was by a bridge and the bridge was over a river and you sat on the crying bench every night and wept for the lovers who had hurt and forgotten you. I wrote back but never heard again. a friend wrote me of your suicide 3 or 4 months after it happened, if I had met you I would probably have been unfair to you or you to me. it was best like this.

And The Moon And The Stars And The World

Long walks at night-that's what good for the soul:
peeking into windows
watching tired housewives trying to fight off
their beer-maddened husbands.

Another Day

having the low down blues and going into a restraunt to eat. you sit at a table. the waitress smiles at you. she's dumpy. her ass is too big. she radiates kindess and symphaty. live with her 3 months and a man would no real agony. o.k., you'll tip her 15 percent. you order a turkey sandwich and a beer. the man at the table across from you has watery blue eyes and a head like an elephant. at a table further down are 3 men with very tiny heads and long necks like ostiches. they talk loudly of land development. why, you think, did I ever come in here when I have the low-down then the the waitress comes back eith the sandwich and she asks you if there will be anything snd you tell her, no no, this will be then somebody behind you laughs. it's a cork laugh filled with sand and broken glass.

you begin eating the sandwhich.

it's something. it's a minor, difficult, sensible action like composing a popular song to make a 14-year old weep. you order another beer. jesus, look at that guy his hands hang down almost to his knees and he's whistling. well, time to get out. pivk up the bill. tip. go to the register. pay. pick up a toothpick. go out the door. your car is still there. and there are 3 men with heads and necks like ostriches all getting into one car.

they each have a toothpick and now they are talking about women. they drive away first they drive away fast. they're best i guess. it's an unberably hot day. there's a first-stage smog alert. all the birds and plants are dead or dying.

you start the engine.

Anonymous submission.

Are You Drinking?

washed-up, on shore, the old yellow notebook out again I write from the bed as I did last year. will see the doctor, Monday. " yes, doctor, weak legs, vertigo, headaches and my back hurts." " are you drinking?" he will ask. " are you getting your exercise, your vitamins?" I think that I am just ill with life, the same stale yet fluctuating factors. even at the track I watch the horses run by and it seems meaningless. I leave early after buying tickets on the remaining races. "taking off?" asks the motel clerk. " yes, it's boring, " I tell him. " If you think it's boring out there," he tells me, "you oughta be back here." so here I am propped up against my pillows again just an old guy just an old writer with a yellow notebook. something is walking across the floor toward me. oh, it's just my cat this time.

As The Poems Go

as the poems go into the thousands you realize that you've created very little.

As The Sparrow

To give life you must take life, and as our grief falls flat and hollow upon the billion-blooded sea I pass upon serious inward-breaking shoals rimmed with white-legged, white-bellied rotting creatures lengthily dead and rioting against surrounding scenes. Dear child, I only did to you what the sparrow did to you; I am old when it is fashionable to be young; I cry when it is fashionable to laugh. I hated you when it would have taken less courage to love.

back to the machine gun

I awaken about noon and go out to get the mail in my old torn bathrobe. I'm hung over hair down in my eyes barefoot gingerly walking on the small sharp rocks in my path still afraid of pain behind my four-day beard.

the young housewife next door shakes a rug out of her window and sees me: "hello, Hank!"

god damn! it's almost like being shot in the ass with a .22

"hello," I say gathering up my Visa card bill, my Pennysaver coupons, a Dept. of Water and Power past-due notice, a letter from the mortgage people plus a demand from the Weed Abatement Department giving me 30 days to clean up my act.

I mince back again over the small sharp rocks thinking, maybe I'd better write something tonight, they all seem to be closing in.

there's only one way to handle those motherfuckers.

the night harness races will have to wait.

Be Kind

we are always asked to understand the other person's viewpoint no matter how out-dated foolish or obnoxious.

Big Night On The Town

drunk on the dark streets of some city, it's night, you're lost, where's your room? you enter a bar to find yourself, order scotch and water. damned bar's sloppy wet, it soaks part of one of your shirt sleeves. It's a clip joint-the scotch is weak. you order a bottle of beer. Madame Death walks up to you wearing a dress. she sits down, you buy her a beer, she stinks of swamps, presses a leg against you. the bar tender sneers. you've got him worried, he doesn't know if you're a cop, a killer, a madman or an Idiot. you ask for a vodka. you pour the vodka into the top of the beer bottle. It's one a.m. In a dead cow world. you ask her how much for head, drink everything down, it tastes like machine oil.

you leave Madame Death there, you leave the sneering bartender there.

you have remembered where your room is. the room with the full bottle of wine on the dresser. the room with the dance of the roaches. Perfection in the Star Turd where love died laughing.

Bluebird

there's a bluebird in my heart that wants to get out but I'm too tough for him, I say, stay in there, I'm not going to let anybody see you.

Carson McCullers

she died of alcoholism wrapped in a blanket on a deck chair on an ocean steamer.

all her books of terrified loneliness

all her books about the cruelty of loveless love were all that was left of her

as the strolling vacationer discovered her body notified the captain

and she was quickly dispatched to somewhere else on the ship

as everything continued just as she had written it

Cause And Effect

the best often die by their own hand just to get away, and those left behind can never quite understand why anybody would ever want to get away from them

close to greatness

at one stage in my life I met a man who claimed to have visited Pound at St. Elizabeths.

then I met a woman who not only claimed to have visited E.P. but also to have made love to him—she even showed me certain sections in the Cantos where Ezra was supposed to have mentioned her.

so there was this man and this woman and the woman told me that Pound had never mentioned a visit from this man and the man claimed that the lady had had nothing to do with the master that she was a charlatan and since I wasn't a Poundian scholar

I didn't know who to believe
but one thing I do know: when a man is living
many claim relationships that are hardly
so
and after he dies, well, then it's everybody's party.

my guess is that Pound knew neither the lady or the gentleman or if he knew one or if he knew both it was a shameful waste of madhouse time.

Confession

waiting for death like a cat that will jump on the bed

I am so very sorry for my wife

she will see this stiff white body shake it once, then maybe again

"Hank!"

Hank won't answer.

it's not my death that worries me, it's my wife left with this pile of nothing.

I want to let her know though that all the nights sleeping beside her

even the useless arguments were things ever splendid and the hard words I ever feared to say can now be said:

I love you.

Consummation Of Grief

I even hear the mountains the way they laugh up and down their blue sides and down in the water the fish cry and the water is their tears. I listen to the water on nights I drink away and the sadness becomes so great I hear it in my clock it becomes knobs upon my dresser it becomes paper on the floor it becomes a shoehorn a laundry ticket it becomes cigarette smoke climbing a chapel of dark vines. . . it matters little very little love is not so bad or very little life what counts is waiting on walls I was born for this I was born to hustle roses down the avenues of the dead.

Cows In Art Class

good weather is like good womenit doesn't always happen and when it does it doesn't always last. man is more stable: if he's bad there's more chance he'll stay that way, or if he's good he might hang on, but a woman is changed by children age diet conversation sex the moon the absence or presence of sun or good times. a woman must be nursed into subsistence by love where a man can become stronger by being hated.

Curtain

the final curtain on one of the longest running musicals ever, some people claim to have seen it over one hundred times. I saw it on the tv news, that final curtain: flowers, cheers, tears, a thunderous accolade. I have not seen this particular musical but I know if I had that I wouldn't have been able to bear it, it would have sickened me. trust me on this, the world and its peoples and its artful entertainment has done very little for me, only to me. still, let them enjoy one another, it will keep them from my door and for this, my own thunderous accolade.

Cut While Shaving

It's never quite right, he said, the way people look, the way the music sounds, the way the words are written.

It's never quite right, he said, all the things we are taught, all the loves we chase, all the deaths we die, all the lives we live, they are never quite right, they are hardly close to right, these lives we live one after the other, piled there as history, the waste of the species, the crushing of the light and the way, it's not quite right, it's hardly right at all he said.

don't I know it? I answered.

I walked away from the mirror. it was morning, it was afternoon, it was night nothing changed it was locked in place. something flashed, something broke, something remained.

I walked down the stairway and into it.

Submitted by Tom

Death Wants More Death

death wants more death, and its webs are full: I remember my father's garage, how child-like I would brush the corpses of flies from the windows they thought were escapetheir sticky, ugly, vibrant bodies shouting like dumb crazy dogs against the glass only to spin and flit in that second larger than hell or heaven onto the edge of the ledge, and then the spider from his dank hole nervous and exposed the puff of body swelling hanging there not really quite knowing, and then knowingsomething sending it down its string, the wet web, toward the weak shield of buzzing, the pulsing; a last desperate moving hair-leg there against the glass there alive in the sun, spun in white; and almost like love: the closing over, the first hushed spider-sucking: filling its sack upon this thing that lived; crouching there upon its back drawing its certain blood as the world goes by outside and my temples scream and I hurl the broom against them: the spider dull with spider-anger still thinking of its prey and waving an amazed broken leg; the fly very still, a dirty speck stranded to straw; I shake the killer loose and he walks lame and peeved towards some dark corner but I intercept his dawdling his crawling like some broken hero, and the straws smash his legs now waving above his head and looking looking for the enemy and somewhat valiant, dying without apparent pain simply crawling backward piece by piece leaving nothing there until at last the red gut sack splashes

its secrets,
and I run child-like
with God's anger a step behind,
back to simple sunlight,
wondering
as the world goes by
with curled smile
if anyone else
saw or sensed my crime

Decline

naked along the side of the house, 8 a.m., spreading sesame seed oil over my body, Jesus, have I come to this? I once battled in dark alleys for a laugh. now I'm not laughing. I splash myself with oil and wonder, how many years do you want? how many days? my blood'is soiled and a dark angel sits in my brain. things are made of something and go to nothing. I understand the fall of cities, of nations. a small plane passes overhead. I look upward as if it made sense to look upward. it's true, the sky has rotted: it won't be long for any of

Eat Your Heart Out

I've come by, she says, to tell you that this is it. I'm not kidding, it's over. this is it. I sit on the couch watching her arrange her long red hair before my bedroom mirror. she pulls her hair up and piles it on top of her headshe lets her eyes look at my eyesthen she drops her hair and lets it fall down in front of her face. we go to bed and I hold her speechlessly from the back my arm around her neck I touch her wrists and hands feel up to her elbows no further. she gets up. this is it, she says, this will do. well, I'm going. I get up and walk her to the door just as she leaves she says, I want you to buy me some high-heeled shoes with tall thin spikes, black high-heeled shoes. no, I want them red. I watch her walk down the cement walk under the trees she walks all right and as the pointsettas drip in the sun I close the door.

Eulogy To A Hell Of A Dame

some dogs who sleep At night must dream of bones and I remember your bones in flesh and best in that dark green dress and those high-heeled bright black shoes, you always cursed when you drank, your hair coming down you wanted to explode out of what was holding you: rotten memories of a rotten past, and you finally got out by dying, leaving me with the rotten present; you've been dead 28 years yet I remember you better than any of the rest; you were the only one who understood the futility of the arrangement of life; all the others were only displeased with trivial segments, carped nonsensically about nonsense; Jane, you were killed by knowing too much. here's a drink to your bones that this dog still dreams about.

Finish

We are like roses that have never bothered to bloom when we should have bloomed and it is as if the sun has become disgusted with waiting finished?

the critics now have me drinking champagne and driving a BMW and also married to a socialite from Philadelphia's Main Line which of course is going to prevent me from writing my earthy and grubby stuff. and they might be right, I could be getting to be more like them, and that's as close to death as you can get.

we'll see.
but don't bury me yet.
don't worry if I drink with Sean Penn.
just measure the poems
as they come off the keyboard.
listen only to them.
after this long fight
I have no intention of quitting short.
or late.
or satisfied.

Flophouse

you haven't lived until you've been in a flophouse with nothing but one light bulb and 56 men squeezed together on cots with everybody snoring at once and some of those snores SO deep and gross and unbelievabledark snotty gross subhuman wheezings from hell itself. your mind álmost breaks under those death-like sounds and the intermingling odors: hard unwashed socks pissed and shitted underwear and over it all slowly circulating air much like that emanating from uncovered garbage cans. and those bodies in the dark fat and thin and bent

some legless armless some mindless and worst of all: the total absence of hope it shrouds them covers them totally. it's not bearable. you get иp go out walk the streets up and down sidewalks past buildings around the corner and back up the samestreet thinking those men were all children what has happened to them? and what has happened to me? it's dark and cold out here.

For Jane

225 days under grass and you know more than I. they have long taken your blood, you are a dry stick in a basket. is this how it works? in this room the hours of love still make shadows.

when you left you took almost everything. I kneel in the nights before tigers that will not let me be.

what you were will not happen again. the tigers have found me and I do not care.

For Jane: With All The Love I Had, Which Was Not Enough

I pick up the skirt, I pick up the sparkling beads in black, this thing that moved once around flesh, and I call God a liar, I say anything that moved like that or knew my name could never die in the common verity of dying, and I pick up her lovely dress, all her loveliness gone, and I speak to all the gods, Jewish gods, Christ-gods, chips of blinking things, idols, pills, bread, fathoms, risks, knowledgeable surrender, rats in the gravy of 2 gone quite mad without a chance, hummingbird knowledge, hummingbird chance, I lean upon this, I lean on all of this and I know: her dress upon my arm: but they will not give her back to me.

For Jane: With All the Love I Had, Which Was Not Enough:

I pick up the skirt, I pick up the sparkling beads in black, this thing that moved once around flesh, and I call God a liar, I say anything that moved like that or knew my name could never die in the common verity of dying, and I pick up her lovely dress, all her loveliness gone, and I speak to all the gods, Jewish gods, Christ-gods, chips of blinking things, idols, pills, bread, fathoms, risks, knowledgeable surrender, rats in the gravy of two gone quite mad without a chance, hummingbird knowledge, hummingbird chance, I lean upon this, I lean on all of this and I know her dress upon my arm but they will not give her back to me.

Freedom

he drank wine all night of the 28th, and he kept thinking of her: the way she walked and talked and loved the way she told him things that seemed true but were not, and he knew the color of each of her dresses and her shoes-he knew the stock and curve of each heel as well as the leg shaped by it.

and she was out again and when he came home, and she'd come back with that special stink again, and she did she came in at 3 a.m in the morning filthy like a dung eating swine and he took out a butchers knife and she screamed backing into the rooming house wall still pretty somehow in spite of love's reek and he finished the glass of wine.

that yellow dress his favorite and she screamed again.

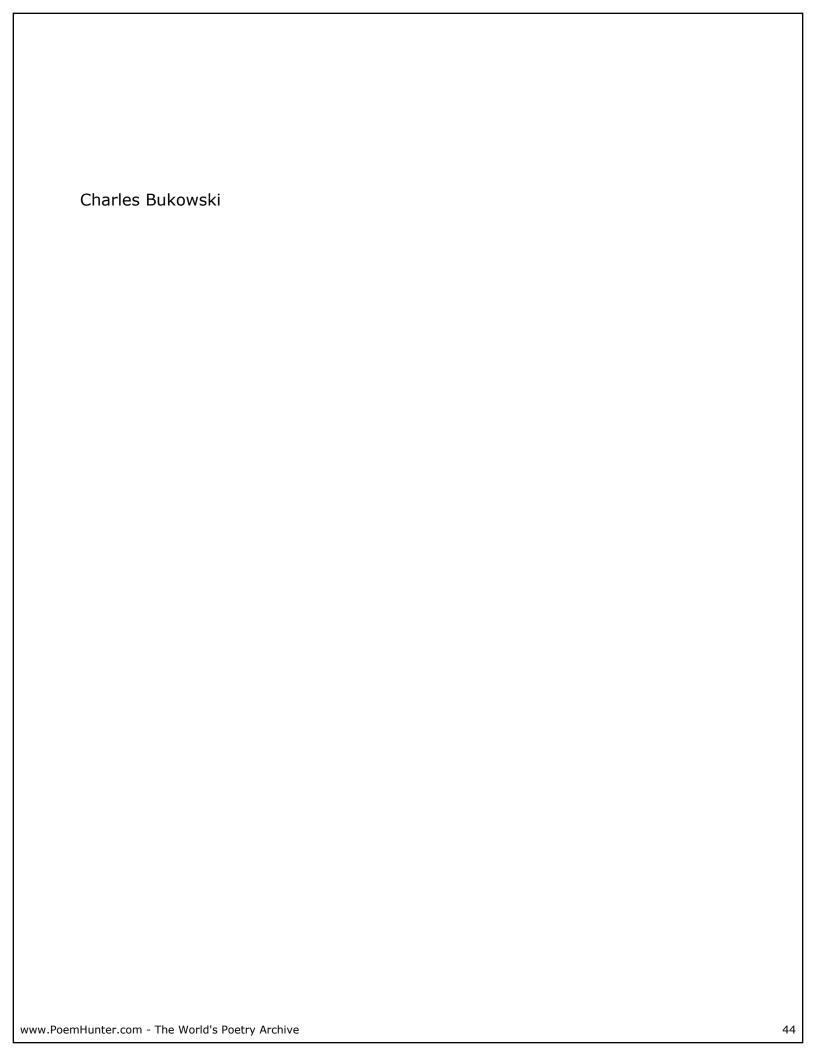

and he took up the knife and unhooked his belt and tore away the cloth before her and cut off his balls.

and carried them in his hands like apricots and flushed them down the toilet bowl and she kept screaming as the room became red

GOD O GOD! WHAT HAVE YOU DONE?

and he sat there holding 3 towels between his legs no caring now whether she left or stayed wore yellow or green or anything at all.

and one hand holding and one hand lifting he poured another wine

Friends Within The Darkness

I can remember starving in a small room in a strange city shades pulled down, listening to classical music
I was young I was so young it hurt like a knife inside because there was no alternative except to hide as long as possible-- not in self-pity but with dismay at my limited chance: trying to connect.

the old composers -- Mozart, Bach, Beethoven, Brahms were the only ones who spoke to me and they were dead.

finally, starved and beaten, I had to go into the streets to be interviewed for low-paying and monotonous jobs by strange men behind desks men without eyes men without faces who would take away my hours break them piss on them.

now I work for the editors the readers the critics but still hang around and drink with Mozart, Bach, Brahms and the Bee some buddies some men sometimes all we need to be able to continue alone are the dead rattling the walls that close us in.

Anonymous submission.

gamblers all

sometimes you climb out of bed in the morning and you think, I'm not going to make it, but you laugh inside remembering all the times you've felt that way, and you walk to the bathroom, do your toilet, see that face in the mirror, oh my oh my oh my, but you comb your hair anyway, get into your street clothes, feed the cats, fetch the newspaper of horror, place it on the coffee table, kiss your wife goodbye, and then you are backing the car out into life itself, like millions of others you enter the arena once more.

you are on the freeway threading through traffic now, moving both towards something and towards nothing at all as you punch the radio on and get Mozart, which is something, and you will somehow get through the slow days and the busy days and the dull days and the hateful days and the rare days, all both so delightful and so disappointing because we are all so alike and so different.

you find the turn-off, drive through the most dangerous part of town, feel momentarily wonderful as Mozart works his way into your brain and slides down along your bones and out through your shoes.

it's been a tough fight worth fighting as we all drive along betting on another day.

Girl In A Miniskirt Reading The Bible Outside My Window

Sunday, I am eating a grapefruit, church is over at the Russian Orthadox to the west.

she is dark
of Eastern descent,
large brown eyes look up from the Bible
then down. a small red and black Bible, and as she reads
her legs keep moving, moving,
she is doing a slow rythmic dance reading the Bible. . .

long gold earrings; 2 gold bracelets on each arm, and it's a mini-suit, I suppose, the cloth hugs her body, the lightest of tans is that cloth, she twists this way and that, long yellow legs warm in the sun. . .

there is no escaping her being there is no desire to. . .

my radio is playing symphonic music that she cannot hear but her movements coincide exactly to the rythms of the symphony. . .

she is dark, she is dark she is reading about God. I am God.

having the flu and with nothing else to do

I read a book about John Dos Passos and according to the book once radical-communist John ended up in the Hollywood Hills living off investments and reading the Wall Street Journal

this seems to happen all too often.

what hardly ever happens is a man going from being a young conservative to becoming an old wild-ass radical however:

young conservatives always seem to become old conservatives. it's a kind of lifelong mental vapor-lock.

but when a young radical ends up an old radical the critics and the conservatives treat him as if he escaped from a mental institution.

such is our politics and you can have it all.

keep it.

sail it up your ass.

hello, how are you?

this fear of being what they are: dead.

at least they are not out on the street, they are careful to stay indoors, those pasty mad who sit alone before their tv sets, their lives full of canned, mutilated laughter.

their ideal neighborhood of parked cars of little green lawns of little homes the little doors that open and close as their relatives visit throughout the holidays the doors closing behind the dying who die so slowly behind the déad who are still alive in your quiet average neighborhood of winding streets of agony of confusion of horror of fear of ignorance.

a dog standing behind a fence.

a man silent at the window.

Here I Am ...

drunk again at 3 a.m. at the end of my 2nd bottle of wine, I have typed from a dozen to 15 pages of poesy an old man maddened for the flesh of young girls in this dwindling twilight liver gone kidneys going pancrea pooped top-floor blood pressure

His Wife, The Painter

There are sketches on the walls of men and women and ducks, and outside a large green bus swerves through traffic like insanity sprung from a waving line; Turgenev, Turgenev, says the radio, and Jane Austin, Jane Austin, too. "I am going to do her portrait on the 28th, while you are at work."

Hooray Say The Roses

hooray say the roses, today is blamesday and we are red as blood.

hooray say the roses, today is Wednesday and we bloom wher soldiers fell and lovers too, and the snake at the word.

hooray say the roses, darkness comes all at once, like lights gone out, the sun leaves dark continents and rows of stone.

hooray say the roses, cannons and spires, birds, bees, bombers, today is Friday the hand holding a medal out the window, a moth going by, half a mile an hour, hooray hooray hooray say the roses we have empires on our stems, the sun moves the mouth: hooray hooray hooray and that is why you like us.

Submitted by .eve.

Hot

she was hot, she was so hot I didn't want anybody else to have her, and if I didn't get home on time she'd be gone, and I couldn't bear that-I'd go mad. . it was foolish I know, childish, but I was caught in it, I was caught. I delivered all the mail and then Henderson put me on the night pickup run in an old army truck, the damn thing began to heat halfway through the run and the night went on me thinking about my hot Miriam and jumping in and out of the truck filling mailsacks the engine continuing to heat up the temperature needle was at the top HOT HOT like Miriam. leaped in and out 3 more pickups and into the station I'd be, my car waiting to get me to Miriam who sat on my blue couch with scotch on the rocks crossing her legs and swinging her ankles like she did, 2 more stops. . the truck stalled at a traffic light, it was hell kicking it over again. . I had to be home by 8,8 was the deadline for Miriam. I made the last pickup and the truck stalled at a signal 1/2 block from the station. . . it wouldn't start, it couldn't start. . . I locked the doors, pulled the key and ran down to the station. . I threw the keys down. . .signed out. . . your goddamned truck is stalled at the signal, I shouted, Pico and Western.I ran down the hall, put the key into the door, opened it. . .her drinking glass was there, and a note:

How Is Your Heart?

during my worst times on the park benches in the jails or living with whores I always had this certain contentment-I wouldn't call it happinessit was more of an inner balance that settled for whatever was occuring and it helped in the factories and when relationships went wrong with the girls.

I like your books

In the betting line the other day man behind me asked, "are you Henry Chinaski?"

"uh huh," I answered.

"I like your books," he went on.

"thanks," I answered.

"who do you like in this race?" he asked.

"uh uh," I answered.

"I like the 4 horse," he told me.

I made my bet and went back to my seat....

the next race I am standing in line and here is this same man standing behind me again. there are at least 50 lines at the windows but he has to find mine again.

"I think this race favors the closers," he said to the back of my neck. "the track looks heavy."

"listen," I said, not looking around, "it's the kiss of death to talk about horses at the track..."

"what kind of rule is that?" he asked. "God doesn't make rules..."

I turned around and looked at him: "maybe not, but I do."

after the next race

I got in line, glanced behind me: he was not there:

lost another reader.

I lose 2 or 3 each week.

fine.

let 'em go back to Kafka.

I Made A Mistake

I reached up into the top of the closet and took out a pair of blue panties and showed them to her and asked " are these yours? "

I Met A Genius

I met a genius on the train today about 6 years old, he sat beside me and as the train ran down along the coast we came to the ocean and then he looked at me and said, it's not pretty.

I'm In Love

she's young, she said, but look at me, I have pretty ankles, and look at my wrists, I have pretty wrists o my god, I thought it was all working, and now it's her again, every time she phones you go crazy, you told me it was over you told me it was finished, listen, I've lived long enough to become a good woman, why do you need a bad woman? you need to be tortured, don't you? you think life is rotten if somebody treats you rotten it all fits, doesn't it? tell me, is that it? do you want to be treated like a piece of shit? and my son, my son was going to meet you. I told my son and I dropped all my lovers. I stood up in a cafe and screamed I'M IN LOVE, and now you've made a fool of me. . . I'm sorry, I said, I'm really sorry. hold me, she said, will you please hold me? I've never been in one of these things before, I said, these triangles. . . she got up and lit a cigarette, she was trembling all over.she paced up and down, wild and crazy.she had a small body her arms were thin, very thin and when she screamed and started beating me I held her wrists and then I got it through the eyes:hatred, centuries deep and true. I was wrong and graceless and sick.all the things I had learned had been wasted. there was no creature living as foul as I and all my poems were false.

it was just a little while ago almost dawn blackbirds on the telephone wire waiting as I eat yesterday's forgotten sandwich at 6 a.m. an a quiet Sunday morning.

one shoe in the corner standing upright the other laying on it's side.

yes, some lives were made to be wasted.

It's Ours

there is always that space there just before they get to us that space that fine relaxer the breather while say flopping on a bed thinking of nothing or say pouring a glass of water from the spigot while entranced by nothing that gentle pure space

it's worth

centuries of existence

say

just to scratch your neck while looking out the window at a bare branch that space there before they get to us ensures that when they do they won't get it all ever.

Anonymous submission.

Jane Icin (For Jane - In Turkish)

cimen altinda gecen 225 gunden sonra benden daha cok sey biliyor olmalisin. Charles Bukowski

Layover

Making love in the sun, in the morning sun in a hotel room above the alley where poor men poke for bottles; making love in the sun making love by a carpet redder than our blood, making love while the boys sell headlines and Cadillacs, making love by a photograph of Paris and an open pack of Chesterfields, making love while other men- poor folkswork. That moment- to this. . . may be years in the way they measure, but it's only one sentence back in my mindthere are so many days when living stops and pulls up and sits and waits like a train on the rails. I pass the hotel at 8 and at 5; there are cats in the alleys and bottles and bums, and I look up at the window and think, I no longer know where you are, and I walk on and wonder where the living goes when it stops.

Let It Enfold You

either peace or happiness, let it enfold you when I was a young man I felt these things were dumb, unsophisticated. I had bad blood, a twisted mind, a precarious upbringing.

I was hard as granite, I leered at the sun.
I trusted no man and especially no woman.

I was living a hell in small rooms, I broke things, smashed things, walked through glass, cursed. I challenged everything, was continually being evicted, jailed,in and out of fights, in and out of my mind. women were something to screw and rail at, I had no male freinds,

I changed jobs and cities, I hated holidays, babies, history, newspapers, museums, grandmothers, marriage, movies, spiders, garbagemen, english accents, spain, france, italy, walnuts and the color orange. algebra angred me, opera sickened me, charlie chaplin was a fake and flowers were for pansies.

peace an happiness to me were signs of inferiority, tenants of the weak an addled mind.

but as I went on with my alley fights, my suicidal years, my passage through any number of women-it gradually began to occur to me that I wasn't different from the others, I was the same,

they were all fulsome with hatred, glossed over with petty greivances, the men I fought in alleys had hearts of stone. everybody was nudging, inching, cheating for some insignificant advantage, the lie was the weapon and the plot was empty, darkness was the dictator.

cautiously, I allowed myself to feel good at times. I found moments of peace in cheap rooms just staring at the knobs of some dresser or listening to the rain in the dark. the less I needed the better I felt.

maybe the other life had worn me down.
I no longer found glamour in topping somebody in conversation. or in mounting the body of some poor drunken female whose life had slipped away into sorrow.

I could never accept life as it was, i could never gobble down all its poisons but there were parts, tenous magic parts open for the asking.

I re formulated I don't know when, date, time, all that but the change occured. something in me relaxed, smoothed out. i no longer had to prove that I was a man,

I did'nt have to prove anything.

I began to see things: coffee cups lined up behind a counter in a cafe. or a dog walking along a sidewalk. or the way the mouse on my dresser top stopped there with its body, its ears, its nose, it was fixed, a bit of life caught within itself and its eyes looked at me and they were beautiful. then- it was gone.

I began to feel good, I began to feel good in the worst situations and there were plenty of those. like say, the boss behind his desk, he is going to have to fire me.

I've missed too many days. he is dressed in a suit, necktie, glasses, he says, "I am going to have to let you go"

"it's all right" I tell him.

He must do what he must do, he has a wife, a house, children. expenses, most probably a girlfreind.

I am sorry for him he is caught.

I walk onto the blazing sunshine. the whole day is mine temporally, anyhow.

(the whole world is at the throat of the world, everybody feels angry, short-changed, cheated, everybody is despondent, dissillusioned)

I welcomed shots of peace, tattered shards of happiness.

I embraced that stuff like the hottest number, like high heels, breasts, singing, the works.

(dont get me wrong, there is such a thing as cockeyed optimism that overlooks all basic problems just for the sake of itself-this is a shield and a sickness.)

The knife got near my throat again, I almost turned on the gas again but when the good moments arrived again I did'nt fight them off like an alley adversary. I let them take me, i luxuriated in them, I bade them welcome home. I even looked into the mirror once having thought myself to be ugly, I now liked what I saw,almost handsome, yes, a bit ripped and ragged, scares, lumps, odd turns, but all in all, not too bad, almost handsome, better at least than some of those movie star faces like the cheeks of a baby's butt.

and finally I discovered real feelings of others, unheralded, like lately, like this morning, as I was leaving, for the track, i saw my wife in bed, just the shape of her head there (not forgetting centuries of the living and the dead and the dying, the pyramids, Mozart dead but his music still there in the room, weeds growing, the earth turning, the toteboard waiting for me) I saw the shape of my wife's head, she so still, I ached for her life, just being there under the covers.

I kissed her in the, forehead, got down the stairway, got outside, got into my marvelous car, fixed the seatbelt, backed out the drive. feeling warm to the fingertips, down to my foot on the gas pedal, I entered the world once more, drove down the hill past the houses full and empty of people, I saw the mailman, honked, he waved back at me.

Anonymous submission.

Like A Flower In The Rain

I cut the middle fingernail of the middle finger right hand real short and I began rubbing along her cunt as she sat upright in bed spreading lotion over her arms face and breasts after bathing. then she lit a cigarette: "don't let this put you off," an smoked and continued to rub the lotion on. I continued to rub the cunt. " You want an apple? " I asked. " sure, she said, " you got one? " but I got to hershe began to twist then she rolled on her side, she was getting wet and open like a flower in the rain. then she rolled on her stomach and her most beautiful ass looked up at me and I reached under and got the cunt again. she reached around and got my cock, she rolled and twisted, I mounted my face falling into the mass of red hair that overflowed from her head and my flattened cock entered into the miracle. later we joked about the lotion and the cigarette and the apple. then I went out and got some chicken and shrimp and french fries and buns and mashed potatoes and gravy and cole slaw, and we ate. she told me how good she felt and I told her how good I felt and we ate the chicken and the shrimp and the french fries and the buns and the mashed potatoes and the gravy and the cole slaw too.

Love & Fame & Death

it sits outside my window now like and old woman going to market; it sits and watches me, it sweats nervously through wire and fog and dog-bark until suddenly I slam the screen with a newspaper like slapping at a fly and you could hear the scream over this plain city, and then it left.

the way to end a poem like this is to become suddenly quiet.

Love & Death

it sits outside my window now like and old woman going to market; it sits and watches me, it sweats nevously through wire and fog and dog-bark until suddenly I slam the screen with a newspaper like slapping at a fly and you could hear the scream over this plain city, and then it left.

the way to end a poem like this is to become suddenly quiet.

Submitted by .eve.

Luck

once we were young at this machine. . .

magical mystery tour

I am in this low-slung sports car painted a deep, rich yellow driving under an Italian sun. I have a British accent. I'm wearing dark shades an expensive silk shirt. there's no dirt under my fingernails. the radio plays Vivaldi and there are two women with me one with raven hair the other a blonde. they have small breasts and beautiful legs and they laugh at everything I say.

as we drive up a steep road the blonde squeezes my leg and nestles closer while raven hair leans across and nibbles my ear.

we stop for lunch at a quaint rustic inn. there is more laughter before lunch during lunch and after lunch.

after lunch we will have a flat tire on the other side of the mountain and the blonde will change the tire while raven hair photographs me lighting my pipe leaning against a tree the perfect background perfectly at peace with sunlight flowers clouds birds everywhere.

Mama

```
here I am
         in the ground
                    my mouth
                    open
                 and I can't even say
                mama,
                   and
the dogs run by and stop and piss on my stone; I get it all except the sun
and my suit is looking bad
and yesterday
                 the last of my left arm
                                              gone
very little left, all harp-like without music.
at least a drunk
in bed with a cigarette might cause 5 fire engines and 33 men.
I can't do
           any thing.
but p.s. -- Hector Richmond in the next tomb thinks only of Mozart and candy caterpillars.
        he is very bad
                    company.
Submitted by .eve.
```

Marina

majestic, majic infinite my little girl is sun on the carpet-out the door picking a flower, ha! an old man, battle-wrecked, emerges from his chair and she looks at me but only sees love, ha!, and I become quick with the world and love right back just like I was meant to do.

Melancholia

the history of melancholia includes all of us.

Metamorphosis

a girlfriend came in built me a bed scrubbed and waxed the kitchen floor scrubbed the walls vacuumed cleaned the toilet the bathtub scrubbed the bathroom floor and cut my toenails and my hair. then all on the same day the plumber came and fixed the kitchen faucet and the toilet and the gas man fixed the heater and the phone man fixed the phone. noe I sit in all this perfection. it is quiet. I have broken off with all 3 of my girlfriends. I felt better when everything was in disorder. it will take me some months to get back to normal: I can't even find a roach to commune with. I have lost my rythm. I can't sleep. I can't eat. I have been robbed of my filth.

my computer

"what?" they say, "you got a computer?"

it's like I have sold out to the enemy.

I had no idea so many people were prejudiced against computers.

even two editors have written me letters about the computer.

one disparaged the computer in a mild and superior way. the other seemed genuinely pissed.

I am aware that a computer can't create a poem. but neither can a typewriter.

yet, still, once or twice a week I hear: "what? you have a computer? you?"

yes, I do and I sit up here almost every night, sometimes with beer or wine, sometimes without and I work the computer. the damn thing even corrects my spelling.

and the poems

come flying out, better than ever.

I have no idea what causes all this computer prejudice.

me?
I want to go
the next step
beyond the computer.
I'm sure it's
there.

and when I get it, they'll say, "hey, you hear, Chinaski got a space-biter!"

"what?"

"yes, it's true!"

"I can't believe it!"

and I'll also have some beer or some wine or maybe nothing at all and I'll be 85 years old driving it home to you and me and to the little girl who lost her sheep. or her computer.

my father was a truly amazing man he pretended to be rich even though we lived on beans and mush and weenies when we sat down to eat, he said, "not everybody can eat like this."

and because he wanted to be rich or because he actually thought he was rich he always voted Republican and he voted for Hoover against Roosevelt and he lost and then he voted for Alf Landon against Roosevelt and he lost again saying, "I don't know what this world is coming to, now we've got that god damned Red in there again and the Russians will be in our backyard next!"

I think it was my father who made me decide to become a bum. I decided that if a man like that wants to be rich then I want to be poor.

and I became a bum. I lived on nickles and dimes and in cheap rooms and on park benches. I thought maybe the bums knew something.

but I found out that most of the bums wanted to be rich too. they had just failed at that.

so caught between my father and the bums I had no place to go and I went there fast and slow. never voted Republican never voted.

buried him like an oddity of the earth like a hundred thousand oddities like millions of other oddities, wasted.

My First Affair With That Older Woman

when I look back now at the abuse I took from her I feel shame that I was so innocent, but I must say she did match me drink for drink, and I realized that her life her feelings for things had been ruined along the way and that I was no mare than a temporary companion; she was ten years older and mortally hurt by the past and the present; she treated me badly: desertion, other men; she brought me immense pain, continually; she lied, stole; there was desertion, other men, yet we had our moments; and our little soap opera ended with her in a coma in the hospital, and I sat at her bed for hours talking to her, and then she opened her eyes and saw me: "I knew it would be you," she said. then hse closed her eyes. the next day she was dead. I drank alone for two years

Charles Bukowski

after that.

my friend, the parking lot attendant

- —he's a dandy
- -small moustache
- —usually sucking on a cigar

he tends to lean into cars as he transacts business

first time I met him, he said, "hey! ya gonna make a killin'?"

"maybe," I answered.

next meeting it was: "hey, Ramrod! what's happening?"

"very little," I told him.

next time I had my girlfriend with me and he just grinned.

next time I was alone.

"hey," he asked, "where's the young chick?"

"I left her at home...."

"Bullshit! I'll bet she dumped you!"

and the next time he really leaned into the car:

"what's a guy like you doing driving a BMW! I'll bet you inherited your money, you didn't get this car with your brains!"

"how'd you guess?" I answered.

that was some weeks ago. I haven't seen him lately. feIlow like that, chances are he just moved on to better things.

My Groupie

I read last Saturday in the redwoods outside of Santa Cruz and I was about 3/4's finished when I heard a long high scream and a quite attractive young girl came running toward me long gown & divine eyes of fire and she leaped up on the stage and screamed: " I WANT YOU! I WANT YOU! TAKE ME! TAKE ME!" I told her, "look, get the hell away from me." but she kept tearing at my clothing and throwing herself at me. " where were you, " I asked her, " when I was living on one candy bar a day and sending short stories to the Atlantic Monthly?" she grabbed my balls and almost twisted them off. her kisses tasted like shitsoup. 2 women jumped up on the stage and carried her off into the woods. I could still hear her screams as I began the next poem. mabye, I thought, I should have taken her on stage in front of all those eyes. but one can never be sure whether it's good poetry or bad acid.

New Mexico

I was fairly drunk when it began and I took out my bottle and used it along the way. I was reading a week or two after Kandel and I did not look quite as pretty but I brought it off and we ended up at the Webbs, 6, 8, 10 of us, and I drank scotch, wine, beer, tequila and noticed a nice one sitting next to me - one tooth missing when she smiled, lovely, and I put my arm around her and began loading her with bullshit. when I awakened at 10 a.m. the next morning I was in a strange house in bed with this woman. she was asleep but looked familiar.

Nirvana

not much chance, Charles Bukowski

No. 6

I'll settle for the 6 horse Charles Bukowski

Now

I sit here on the 2nd floor hunched over in yellow pajamas still pretending to be a writer. some damned gall, at 71, my brain cells eaten away by life. rows of books behind me, I scratch my thinning hair and search for the word.

O, We Are The Outcasts

ah, christ, what a CREW: more poetry, always more P O E T R Y.

if it doesn't come, coax it out with a laxative. get your name in LIGHTS, get it up there in $8\ 1/2\ x\ 11$ mimeo.

keep it coming like a miracle.

ah christ, writers are the most sickening of all the louts! yellow-toothed, slump-shouldered, gutless, flea-bitten and obvious . . . in tinker-toy rooms with their flabby hearts they tell us what's wrong with the worldas if we didn't know that a cop's club can crack the head and that war is a dirtier game than marriage . . . or down in a basement bar hiding from a wife who doesn't appreciate him and children he doesn't want he tells us that his heart is drowning in vomit. hell, all our hearts are drowning in vomit, in pork salt, in bad verse, in soggy love. but he thinks he's alone and he thinks he's special and he thinks he's Rimbaud and he thinks he's Pound.

and death! how about death? did you know that we all have to die? even Keats died, even Milton! and D. Thomas-THEY KILLED HIM, of course. Thomas didn't want all those free drinks all that free pussy-they . . . FORCED IT ON HIM when they should have left him alone so he could write write WRITE!

poets.

and there's another type. I've met them at their country places (don't ask me what I was doing there because they were born with money and they don't have to dirty their hands in slaughterhouses or washing dishes in grease joints or driving cabs or pimping or selling pot.

I don't know).

this gives them time to understand Life.

they walk in with their cocktail glass held about heart high and when they drink they just sip.

you are drinking green beer which you brought with you because you have found out through the years that rich bastards are tightthey use 5 cent stamps instead of airmail they promise to have all sorts of goodies ready upon your arrival from gallons of whisky to 50 cent cigars. but it's never and they HIDE their women from youtheir wives, x-wives, daughters, maids, so forth, because they've read your poems and figure all you want to do is fuck everybody and everything, which once might have been true but is no longer quite true.

andhe WRITES TOO. POETRY, of course. everybody writes poetry.

he has plenty of time and a postoffice box in town and he drives there 3 or 4 times a day looking and hoping for accepted poems.

he thinks that poverty is a weakness of the soul.

he thinks your mind is ill because you are drunk all the time and have to work in a factory 10 or 12 hours a night.

he brings his wife in, a beauty, stolen from a poorer rich man. he lets you gaze for 30 seconds then hustles her out. she has been crying for some reason.

you've got 3 or 4 days to linger in the guesthouse he says, "come on over to dinner sometime." but he doesn't say when or where. and then you find out that you are not even IN HIS HOUSE.

you are in ONE of his houses but his house is somewhere else-you don't know where.

he even has x-wives in some of his houses.

his main concern is to keep his x-wives away from you. he doesn't want to give up a damn thing. and you can't blame him: his x-wives are all young, stolen, kept, talented, well-dressed, schooled, with varying French-German accents.

and!: they WRITE POETRY TOO. or PAINT. or fuck.

but his big problem is to get down to that mail box in town to get back his rejected poems and to keep his eye on all the other mail boxes in all his other houses.

meanwhile, the starving Indians sell beads and baskets in the streets of the small desert town.

the Indians are not allowed in his houses not so much because they are a fuck-threat but because they are dirty and ignorant. dirty? I look down at my shirt with the beerstain on the front. ignorant? I light a 6 cent cigar and forget about it.

he or they or somebody was supposed to meet me at the train station.

of course, they weren't there. " We'll be there to meet the great Poet! "

well, I looked around and didn't see any great poet. besides it was 7 a.m. and 40 degrees. those things happen. the trouble was there were no bars open. nothing open. not even a jail.

he's a poet. he's also a doctor, a head-shrinker. no blood involved that way. he won't tell me whether I am crazy or not-I don't have the money.

he walks out with his cocktail glass disappears for 2 hours, 3 hours, then suddenly comes walking back in unannounced with the same cocktail glass to make sure I haven't gotten hold of something more precious than Life itself.

my cheap green beer is killing me. he shows heart (hurrah) and gives me a little pill that stops my gagging. but nothing decent to drink.

he'd bought a small 6 pack for my arrival but that was gone in an hour and 15 minutes. "I'll buy you barrels of beer," he had said.

I used his phone (one of his phones) to get deliveries of beer and cheap whisky. the town was ten miles away, downhill. I peeled my poor dollars from my poor roll. and the boy needed a tip, of course.

the way it was shaping up I could see that I was hardly Dylan Thomas yet, not even Robert Creeley. certainly Creeley wouldn't have had beerstains on his shirt.

anyhow, when I finally got hold of one of his x-wives I was too drunk to make it.

scared too. sure, I imagined him peering through the window-he didn't want to give up a damn thing-and leveling the luger while I was working while " The March to the Gallows" was playing over the Muzak and shooting me in the ass first and my poor brain later.

" an intruder, " I could hear him telling them, " ravishing one of my helpless x-wives. "

I see him published in some of the magazines now. not very good stuff.

a poem about me too: the Polack.

the Polack whines too much. the Polack whines about his country, other countries, all countries, the Polack works overtime in a factory like a fool, among other fools with "pre-drained spirits." the Polack drinks seas of green beer full of acid. the Polack has an ulcerated hemorrhoid. the Polack picks on fags "fragile fags." the Polack hates his wife, hates his daughter. his daughter will become an alcoholic, a prostitute. the Polack has an

" obese burned out wife. " the Polack has a spastic gut. the Polack has a " rectal brain. "

thank you, Doctor (and poet). any charge for this? I know I still owe you for the pill.

Your poem is not too good but at least I got your starch up. most of your stuff is about as lively as a wet and deflated beachball. but it is your round, you've won a round. going to invite me out this Summer? I might scrape up trainfare. got an Indian friend who'd like to meet you and yours. he swears he's got the biggest pecker in the state of California.

and guess what? he writes POETRY too!

Oh Yes

there are worse things than being alone but it often takes decades to realize this and most often when you do it's too late and there's nothing worse than too late.

On Going Back To The Street After Viewing An Art Show

they talk down through the centuries to us, and this we need more and more, the statues and paintings in midnight age as we go along holding dead hands.

and we would say rather than delude the knowing: a damn good show, but hardly enough for a horse to eat, and out on the sunshine street where eyes are dabbled in metazoan faces i decide again that in theses centuries they have done very well considering the nature of their brothers: it's more than good that some of them, (closer really to the field-mouse than falcon) have been bold enough to try.

Anonymous submission.

one thirty-six a.m.

I laugh sometimes when I think about say
Céline at a typewriter or Dostoevsky... or Hamsun... ordinary men with feet, ears, eyes, ordinary men with hair on their heads sitting there typing words while having difficulties with life while being puzzled almost to madness.

Dostoevsky gets up he leaves the machine to piss, comes back drinks a glass of milk and thinks about the casino and the roulette wheel.

Céline stops, gets up, walks to the window, looks out, thinks, my last patient died today, I won't have to make any more visits there.
when I saw him last he paid his doctor bill; it's those who don't pay their bills, they live on and on.
Céline walks back, sits down at the machine is still for a good two minutes then begins to type.

Hamsun stands over his machine thinking, I wonder if they are going to believe all these things I write? he sits down, begins to type. he doesn't know what a writer's block is: he's a prolific son-of-a-bitch damn near as magnificent as the sun. he types away.

and I laugh
not out loud
but all up and down these walls, these dirty yellow and blue walls my white cat asleep on the table
hiding his eyes from the light.

he's not alone tonight

and neither am I.

Out Of The Arm Of One Love...

out of the arm of one love and into the arms of another

Paris

never
even in calmer times
have I ever
dreamed of bicycling through that city
wearing a beret

and Camus always pissed me off.

Poem For My 43rd Birthday

To end up alone in a tomb of a room without cigarettes or wine-- just a lightbulb and a potbelly, grayhaired, and glad to have the room.

Poetry

it takes a lot of

Prayer In Bad Weather

by God, I don't know what to Charles Bukowski

Pull A String, A Puppet Moves

each man must realize that it can all disappear very quickly: the cat, the woman, the job, the front tire, the bed, the walls, the room; all our necessities including love, rest on foundations of sand and any given cause, no matter how unrelated: the death of a boy in Hong Kong or a blizzard in Omaha ... can serve as your undoing. all your chinaware crashing to the kitchen floor, your girl will enter and you'll be standing, drunk, in the center of it and she'll ask: my god, what's the matter? and you'll answer: I don't know, I don't know ...

Question And Answer

he sat naked and drunk in a room of summer night, running the blade of the knife under his fingernails, smiling, thinking of all the letters he had received telling him that the way he lived and wrote about that—it had kept them going when all seemed truly hopeless.

Rain

a symphony orchestra.

Rain Or Shine

the vultures at the zoo (all three of them) sit very quietly in their caged tree and below on the ground are chunks of rotten meat. the vultures are over-full. our taxes have fed them well.

we move on to the next cage.
a man is in there sitting on the ground eating his own shit. i recognize him as our former mailman. his favorite expression had been:
"have a beautiful day."

that day i did.

Raw With Love

little dark girl with kind eyes when it comes time to use the knife I won't flinch and I won't blame as I drive along the shore alone as the palms wave, the ugly heavy palms, as the living does not arrive as the dead do not leave, I won't blame you, instead I will remember the kisses our lips raw with love and how you gave me everything you had and how I offered you what was left of and I will remember your small room the feel of you the light in the window your records your books our morning coffee our noons our nights our bodies spilled together sleeping the tiny flowing currents immediate and forever your leg my leg your arm my arm your smile and the warmth of you who made me laugh again. little dark girl with kind eyes you have no knife. the knife is mine and I won't use it vet.

Revolt In The Ranks

I have just spent one-hour-and-a-half handicapping tomorrow's card. when am I going to get at the poems? well, they'll just have to wait they'll have to warm their feet in the anteroom where they'll sit gossiping about " this Chinaski, doesn't he realize that without us he would have long ago gone mad, been dead?" " he knows, but he thinks he can keep us at his beck and call!" "he's an ingrate!" " let's give him writer's block! " "yeah!" " yeah!" " yeah! & quot; the little poems kick up their heels and laugh. then the biggest one gets up and walks toward the door. " hey, where are you going? " he is asked. " somewhere where I am appreciated." then, he and the others vanish.

Rhyming Poem

the goldfish sing all night with guitars, and the whores go down with the stars, the whores go down with the stars

Shoes

when you're young a pair of female high-heeled shoes just sitting alone in the closet can fire your bones; when you're old it's just a pair of shoes without anybody in them and just as well.

Short Order

I took my girlfriend to your last poetry reading, she said. yes, yes? I asked. she's young and pretty, she said. and? I asked. she hated your guts.

Show Biz

I can't have it and you can't have it and we won't get it so don't bet on it or even think about it just get out of bed each morning

wash shave clothe yourself and go out into it because outside of that all that's left is suicide and madness

so you just can't expect too much

you can't even expect

so what you do is work from a modest minimal base

like when you walk outside be glad your car might possibly be there and if it isthat the tires aren't flat

then you get in and if it starts--you start.

and it's the damndest movie you've ever seen because you're in it--

low budget and 4 billion critics and the longest run you ever hope for is one day.

Submitted by Tom

Sleep

she was a short one getting fat and she had once been beautiful and she drank the wine she drank the wine in bed and talked and screamed and cursed at me and i told her small conversation in the afternoon with John Fante

he said, "I was working in Hollywood when Faulkner was working in Hollywood and he was the worst: he was too drunk to stand up at the end of the afternoon and so I had to help him into a taxi day after day after day.

"but when he left Hollywood, I stayed on, and while I didn't drink like that maybe I should have, I might have had the guts then to follow him and get the hell out of there."

I told him, "you write as well as Faulkner.:

"you mean that?" he asked from the hospital bed, smiling.

So Now?

the words have come and gone, I sit ill. the phone rings, the cats sleep. Linda vacuums. I am waiting to live, waiting to die.

Some People

some people never go crazy.
me, sometimes I'll lie down behind the couch for 3 or 4 days.
they'll find me there.
it's Cherub, they'll say, and they pour wine down my throat rub my chest
sprinkle me with oils.

Somebody

god I got the sad blue blues, Charles Bukowski

Something For The Touts, The Nuns, The Grocery Clerks, And You . . .

we have everything and we have nothing and some men do it in churches and some men do it by tearing butterflies in half and some men do it in Palm Springs laying it into butterblondes with Cadillac souls Cadillacs and butterflies nothing and everything, the face melting down to the last puff in a cellar in Corpus Christi. there's something for the touts, the nuns, the grocery clerks and you . . something at 8 a.m., something in the library something in the river, everything and nothing. in the slaughterhouse it comes running along the ceiling on a hook, and you swing it -one two three and then you've got it, $200 worth of dead meat, its bones against your bones something and nothing. it's always early enough to die and it's always too late, and the drill of blood in the basin white it tells you nothing at all and the gravediggers playing poker over 5 a.m. coffee, waiting for the grass to dismiss the frost . . they tell you nothing at all.

we have everything and we have nothing -days with glass edges and the impossible stink of river moss -- worse than shit; checkerboard days of moves and countermoves, fagged interest, with as much sense in defeat as in victory; slow days like mules humping it slagged and sullen and sun-glazed up a road where a madman sits waiting among bluejays and wrens netted in and sucked a flakey good days too of wine and shouting, fights in alleys, fat legs of women striving around your bowels buried in moans, the signs in bullrings like diamonds hollering Mother Capri, violets coming out of the ground telling you to forget the dead armies and the loves that robbed you. days when children say funny and brilliant things like savages trying to send you a message through their bodies while their bodies are still alive enough to transmit and feel and run up and down without locks and paychecks and ideals and possessions and beetle-like opinions. days when you can cry all day long in a green room with the door locked, days when you can laugh at the breadman because his legs are too long, days of looking at hedges . . .

and nothing, and nothing, the days of the bosses, yellow men with bad breath and big feet, men who look like frogs, hyenas, men who walk as if melody had never been invented, men who think it is intelligent to hire and fire and profit, men with expensive wives they possess like 60 acres of ground to be drilled or shown-off or to be walled away from the incompetent, men who'd kill you because they're crazy and justify it because it's the law, men who stand in front of windows 30 feet wide and see nothing, men with luxury yachts who can sail around the world and yet never get out of their vest pockets, men like snails, men like eels, men like slugs, and not as good . . and nothing, getting your last paycheck at a harbor, at a factory, at a hospital, at an aircraft plant, at a penny arcade, at a barbershop, at a job you didn't want income tax, sickness, servility, broken arms, broken heads -- all the stuffing come out like an old pillow.

we have everything and we have nothing. some do it well enough for a while and then give way. fame gets them or disgust or age or lack of proper diet or ink across the eyes or children in college or new cars or broken backs while skiing in Switzerland or new politics or new wives or just natural change and decay -- the man you knew yesterday hooking for ten rounds or drinking for three days and three nights by the Sawtooth mountains now just something under a sheet or a cross or a stone or under an easy delusion, or packing a bible or a golf bag or a briefcase: how they go, how they go! -- all the ones you thought would never go.

days like this. like your day today. maybe the rain on the window trying to get through to you. what do you see today? what is it? where are you? the best days are sometimes the first, sometimes the middle and even sometimes the last. the vacant lots are not bad, churches in Europe on postcards are not bad, people in wax museums frozen into their best sterility are not bad, horrible but not bad. the cannon, think of the cannon, and toast for breakfast the coffee hot enough you know your tongue is still there, three geraniums outside a window, trying to be red and trying to be pink and trying to be geraniums, no wonder sometimes the women cry, no wonder the mules don't want to go up the hill, are you in a hotel room in Detroit looking for a cigarette? one more good day, a little bit of it, and as the nurses come out of the building after their shift, having had enough, eight nurses with different names and different places to go -- walking across the lawn, some of them want cocoa and a paper, some of them want a hot bath, some of them want a man, some of them are hardly thinking at all, enough and not enough. arcs and pilgrims, oranges gutters, ferns, antibodies, boxes of tissue paper.

in the most decent sometimes sun there is the softsmoke feeling from urns and the canned sound of old battleplanes and if you go inside and run your finger along the window ledge you'll find dirt, maybe even earth. and if you look out the window there will be the day, and as you get older you'll keep looking keep looking sucking your tongue in a little ah ah no no maybe some do it naturally some obscenely everywhere.

Submitted by Dylan Skola

splash

the illusion is that you are simply reading this poem. the reality is that this is more than a poem. this is a beggar's knife. this is a tulip. this is a soldier marching through Madrid. this is you on your death bed. this is Li Po laughing underground. this is not a god-damned poem. this is a horse asleep. a butterfly in your brain. this is the devil's circus. you are not reading this on a page. the page is reading you. feel it? it's like a cobra. it's a hungry eagle circling the room.

this is not a poem. poems are dull, they make you sleep.

these words force you to a new madness.

you have been blessed, you have been pushed into a blinding area of light.

the elephant dreams with you now. the curve of space bends and laughs.

you can die now.
you can die now as
people were meant to die:
great,
victorious,
hearing the music,

being the music, roaring, roaring.

Sway With Me

sway with me, everything sad -madmen in stone houses without doors,
lepers steaming love and song frogs trying to figure
the sky;
sway with me, sad things -fingers split on a forge old age like breakfast shell used books, used people used flowers, used love
I need you
I need you
I need you:
it has run away
like a horse or a dog,
dead or lost
or unforgiving.

Submitted by .eve.

The Aliens

you may not believe it but there are people who go through life with very little friction or distress. they dress well, eat well, sleep well. they are contented with their family life. they have moments of grief but all in all they are undisturbed and often feel very good. and when they die it is an easy death, usually in their sleep.

The Blackbirds are Rough Today lonely as a dry and used orchard spread over the earth for use and surrender.

shot down like an ex-pug selling dailies on the corner.

taken by tears like an aging chorus girl who has gotten her last check.

a hanky is in order your lord your worship.

the blackbirds are rough today like ingrown toenails in an overnight jail--- wine wine whine, the blackbirds run around and fly around harping about Spanish melodies and bones.

and everywhere is nowhere--the dream is as bad as flapjacks and flat tires:

why do we go on with our minds and pockets full of dust like a bad boy just out of school--you tell me, you who were a hero in some revolution you who teach children you who drink with calmness you who own large homes and walk in gardens you who have killed a man and own a beautiful wife you tell me why I am on fire like old dry garbage.

we might surely have some interesting correspondence.

it will keep the mailman busy.
and the butterflies and ants and bridges and cemeteries
the rocket-makers and dogs and garage mechanics will still go on a while
until we run out of stamps and/or ideas.

don't be ashamed of anything; I guess God meant it all like locks on doors.

the crunch

too much too little

too fat too thin or nobody.

laughter or tears

haters lovers

strangers with faces like the backs of thumb tacks armies running through streets of blood waving winebottles bayoneting and fucking virgins.

an old guy in a cheap room with a photograph of M. Monroe.

there is a loneliness in this world so great that you can see it in the slow movement of the hands of a clock people so tired mutilated either by love or no love.

people just are not good to each other one on one.

the rich are not good to the rich the poor are not good to the poor.

we are afraid.

our educational system tells us that we can all be big-ass winners

it hasn't told us about the gutters or the suicides.

or the terror of one person aching in one place alone

untouched unspoken to watering a plant.

people are not good to each other. people are not good to each other. people are not good to each other.

I suppose they never will be. I don't ask them to be.

but sometimes I think about it.

the beads will swing the clouds will cloud and the killer will behead the child like taking a bite out of an ice cream cone.

too much too little

too fat too thin or nobody

more haters than lovers.

people are not good to each other. perhaps if they were our deaths would not be so sad.

meanwhile I look at young girls stems flowers of chance.

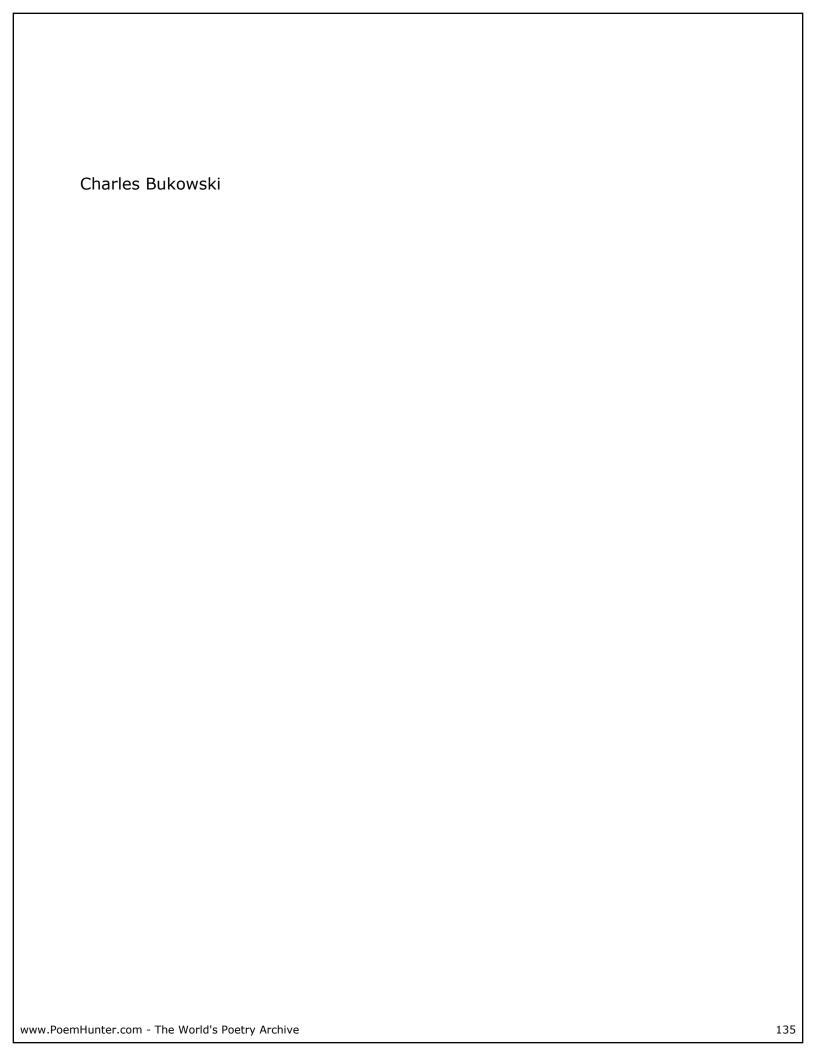

there must be a way.

surely there must be a way that we have not yet though of.

who put this brain inside of me?

it cries it demands it says that there is a chance.

it will not say "no."

The Genius Of The Crowd

there is enough treachery, hatred violence absurdity in the average human being to supply any given army on any given day and the best at murder are those who preach against it and the best at hate are those who preach love and the best at war finally are those who preach peace

those who preach god, need god those who preach peace do not have peace those who preach peace do not have love

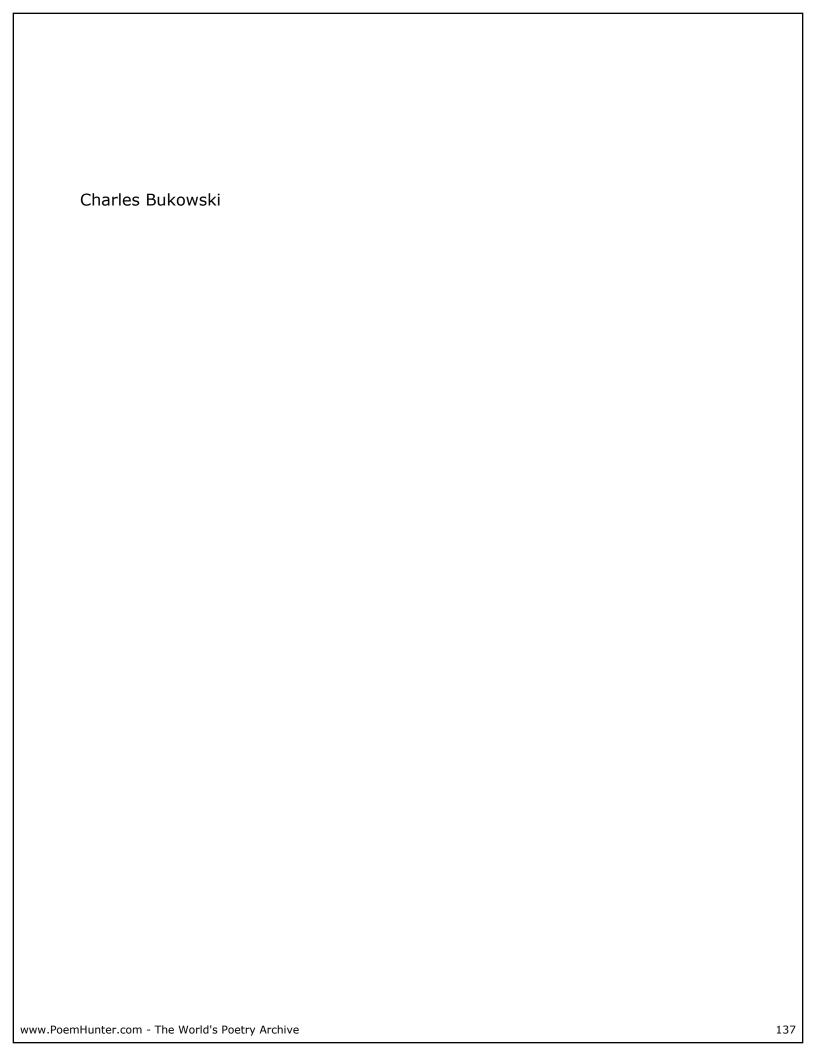

beware the preachers
beware the knowers
beware those who are always reading books beware those who either detest poverty or are proud of it
beware those quick to praise for they need praise in return beware those who are quick to censor they are afraid of what they do not know beware those who seek constant crowds for they are nothing alone
beware the average man the average woman beware their love, their love is average seeks average

but there is genius in their hatred there is enough genius in their hatred to kill you to kill anybody not wanting solitude not understanding solitude they will attempt to destroy anything that differs from their own not being able to create art they will not understand art they will consider their failure as creators only as a failure of the world not being able to love fully they will believe your love incomplete and then they will hate you and their hatred will be perfect

like a shining diamond like a knife like a mountain like a tiger like hemlock

their finest art

Submitted by Holt

the German hotel

the German hotel was very strange and expensive and had double doors to the rooms, very thick doors, and it overlooked the park and the vasser tern and in the mornings it was usually too late for breakfast and the maids would be everywhere changing sheets and bringing in towels, but you never saw any hotel guests, only the maids and the desk man and the day desk man was all right because we were sober during the day but we had trouble with the night man who was some sort of snob and not very good with getting the corkscrews and ice and wine glasses up to us and he was always phoning to say the other guests objected to our noise. what other guests?

I always told him that everything was very quiet, nothing was going on, that somebody must be crazy, so will you please stop ringing?

but he kept ringing, he became almost like a companion to us through the night.

but the day man was very nice, he always had little messages of importance that either meant money, or a good friend coming to see us, or both.

we stayed at the hotel twice during our trip to Europe and each time we checked out the day clerk bowed ever so slightly, he was tall and well-dressed and pleasant and he said each time: "it was nice to have you with us. please come here again if you return."

"thank you," we said, "thank you."

it's our favorite hotel and if I ever get rich I am going to buy it and fire the night clerk and there will be enough ice cubes and corkscrews for everybody.

the great slob

I was always a natural slob
I liked to lay upon the bed in undershirt (stained, of course) (and with cigarette holes)
shoes off
beerbottle in hand
trying to shake off a difficult night, say with a woman still around
walking the floor
complaining about this and that,
and I'd work up a belch and say, "HEY, YOU DON'T LIKE IT? THEN GET YOUR ASS OUT OF HERE!"

I really loved myself, I really loved my slobself, and they seemed to also: always leaving but almost always coming back.

The History Of One Tough Motherfucker

he came to the door one night wet thin beaten and terrorized a white cross-eyed tailless cat I took him in and fed him and he stayed grew to trust me until a friend drove up the driveway and ran him over I took what was left to a vet who said,"not much chance...give him these pills...his backbone is crushed, but is was crushed before and somehow mended, if he lives he'll never walk, look at these x-rays, he's been shot, look here, the pellets are still there...also, he once had a tail, somebody cut it off..."

The House

They are building a house half a block down and I sit up here with the shades down listening to the sounds, the hammers pounding in nails, thack thack thack thack, and then I hear birds, and thack thack thack, and I go to bed, I pull the covers to my throat; they have been building this house for a month, and soon it will have its people...sleeping, eating, loving, moving around, but somehow now it is not right, there seems a madness, men walk on top with nails in their mouths and I read about Castro and Cuba, and at night I walk by and the ribs of the house show and inside I can see cats walking the way cats walk, and then a boy rides by on a bicycle and still the house is not done and in the morning the men will be back walking around on the house with their hammers, and it seems people should not build houses anymore, it seems people should not get married anymore, it seems people should stop working and sit in small rooms on 2nd floors under electric lights without shades; it seems there is a lot to forget and a lot not to do, and in drugstores, markets, bars, the people are tired, they do not want to move, and I stand there at night and look through this house and the house does not want to be built; through its sides I can see the purple hills and the first lights of evening, and it is cold and I button my coat and I stand there looking through the house and the cats stop and look at me until I am embarrased and move North up the sidewalk where I will buy cigarettes and beer and return to my room.

The Icecream People

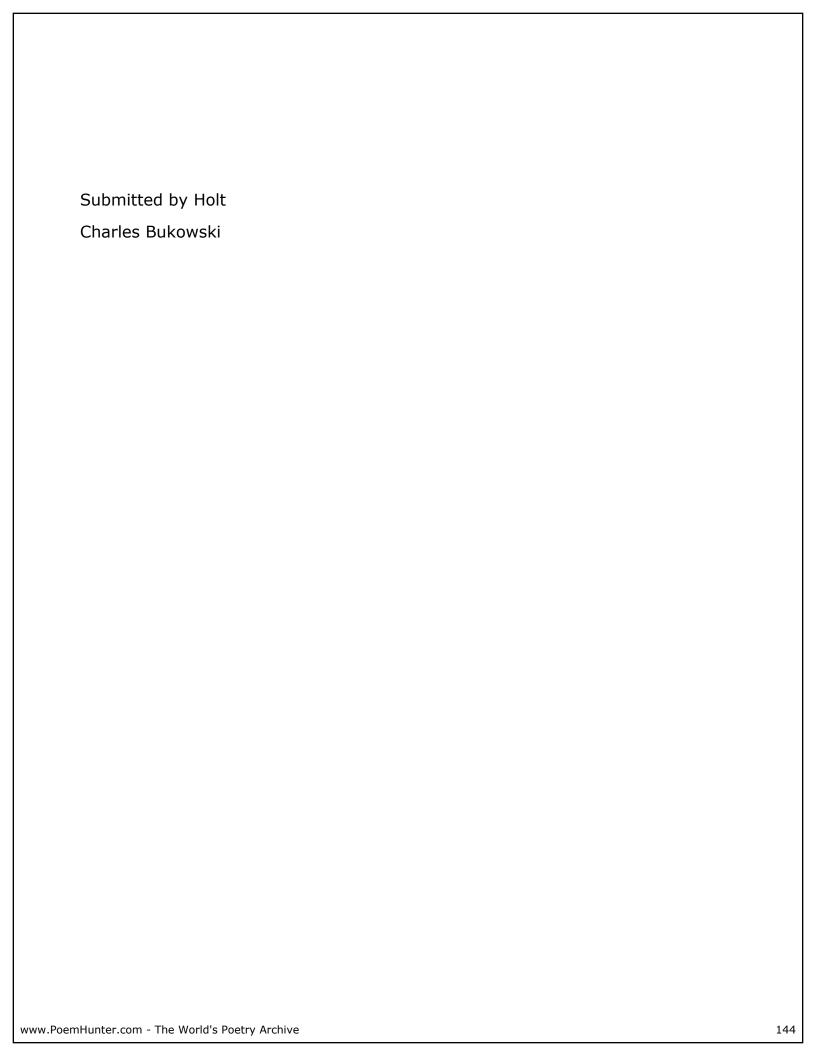

the lady has me temporarily off the bottle and now the pecker stands up better. however, things change overnight--instead of listening to Shostakovich and Mozart through a smeared haze of smoke the nights change, new complexities: we drive to Baskin-Robbins, 31 flavors: Rocky Road, Bubble Gum, Apricot Ice, Strawberry Cheesecake, Chocolate Mint...

we park outside and look at icecream people a very healthy and satisfied people, nary a potential suicide in sight (they probably even vote) and I tell her "what if the boys saw me go in there? suppose they find out I'm going in for a walnut peach sundae?" "come on, chicken," she laughs and we go in and stand with the icecream people. none of them are cursing or threatening the clerks. there seem to be no hangovers or grievances. I am alarmed at the placid and calm wave that flows about. I feel like a leper in a beauty contest. we finally get our sundaes and sit in the car and eat them.

I must admit they are quite good. a curious new world. (all my friends tell me I am looking better. "you're looking good, man, we thought you were going to die there for a while...") --those 4,500 dark nights, the jails, the hospitals...

and later that night there is use for the pecker, use for love, and it is glorious, long and true, and afterwards we speak of easy things; our heads by the open window with the moonlight looking through, we sleep in each other's arms.

the icecream people make me feel good, inside and out.

the lucky ones

stuck in the rain on the freeway, 6:15 p.m., these are the lucky ones, these are the dutifully employed, most with their radios on as loud as possible as they try not to think or remember.

this is our new civilization: as men once lived in trees and caves now they live in their automobiles and on freeways as the local news is heard again and again while we shift from first gear to second and back to first.

there's a poor fellow stalled in the fast lane ahead, hood up, he's standing against the freeway fence a newspaper over his head in the rain.

the other cars force their way around his car, pull out into the next lane in front of cars determined to shut them off.

in the lane to my right a driver is being followed by a police car with blinking red and blue lights - he surely can't be speeding suddenly the rain comes down in a giant wash and all the cars stop and even with the windows up I can smell somebody's clutch burning.

I just hope it's not mine as the wall of water diminishes and we go back into first gear; we are all still a long way from home as I memorize the silhouette of the car in front of me and the shape of the driver's head or what I can see of it above the headrest while his bumper sticker asks me HAVE YOU HUGGED YOUR KID TODAY?

suddenly I have an urge to scream as another wall of water comes down and the man on the radio announces that there will be a 70 percent chance of showers tomorrow night

The Meek Shall Inherit The Earth

if I suffer at this typewriter think how I'd feel among the lettucepickers of Salinas?

The Most

here comes the fishhead singing Charles Bukowski

	The Most Beau	tiful Woman In Tov	wn
	Charles Bukowsk	(i
w	www.PoemHunter.com - The World'	s Poetry Archive		148

The Night I Was Going To Die

the night I was going to die Charles Bukowski

The Poetry Reading

at high noon

The Retreat

this time has finished me.

The Shower

we like to shower afterwards Charles Bukowski

The Sun Weilds Mercy

and the sun weilds mercy but like a jet torch carried to high, and the jets whip across its sight and rockets leap like toads, and the boys get out the maps and pin-cuishon the moon, old green cheese, no life there but too much on earth: our unwashed India boys crosssing their legs, playing pipes, starving with sucked in bellies, watching the snakes volute like beautiful women in the hungry air; the rockets leap, the rockets leap like hares, clearing clump and dog replacing out-dated bullets; the Chineses still carve in jade, quietly stuffing rice into their hunger, a hunger a thousand years old, their muddy rivers moving with fire and song, barges, houseboats pushed by drifting poles of waiting without wanting; in Turkey they face the East on their carpets praying to a purple god who smokes and laughs and sticks fingers in their eyes blinding them, as gods will do; but the rockets are ready: peace is no longer, for some reason, precious; madness drifts like lily pads on a pond circling senselessly; the painters paint dipping their reds and greens and yellows, poets rhyme their lonliness, musicians starve as always and the novelists miss the mark, but not the pelican, the gull; pelicans dip and dive, rise, shaking shocked half-dead radioactive fish from their beaks; indeed, indeed, the waters wash the rocks with slime; and on wall st. the market staggers like a lost drunk looking for his key; ah, this will be a good one, by God: it will take us back to the sabre-teeth, the winged monkey scrabbling in pits over bits

of helmet, instrument and glass; a lightning crashes across the window and in a million rooms lovers lie entwined and lost and sick as peace; the sky still breaks red and orange for the painters-and for the lovers, flowers open as they always have opened but covered with thin dust of rocket fuel and mushrooms, poison mushrooms; it's a bad time, a dog-sick time-curtain act 3, standing room only, SOLD OUT, SOLD OUT, SOLD OUT again, by god, by somebody and something, by rockets and generals and leaders, by poets, doctors, comedians, by manufacturers of soup and biscuits, Janus-faced hucksters of their own indexerity; I can now see now the coal-slick contanminated fields, a snail or 2, bile, obsidian, a fish or 3 in the shallows, an obloquy of our source and our sight..... has this happend before? is history a circle that catches itself by the tail, a dream, a nightmare, a general's dream, a presidents dream, a dictators dream... can't we awaken? or are the forces of life greater than we are? can't we awaken? must we foever, dear freinds, die in our sleep?

Anonymous submission.

The Sun Wields Mercy

and the sun wields mercy but like a jet torch carried to high, and the jets whip across its sight and rockets leap like toads, and the boys get out the maps and pin-cushion the moon, old green cheese, no life there but too much on earth: our unwashed India boys crossing their legs, playing pipes, starving with sucked in bellies, watching the snakes volute like beautiful women in the hungry air; the rockets leap, the rockets leap like hares, clearing clump and dog replacing out-dated bullets; the Chinese still carve in jade, quietly stuffing rice into their hunger, a hunger a thousand years old, their muddy rivers moving with fire and song, barges, houseboats pushed by drifting poles of waiting without wanting; in Turkey they face the East on their carpets praying to a purple god who smokes and laughs and sticks fingers in their eyes blinding them, as gods will do; but the rockets are ready: peace is no longer, for some reason, precious; madness drifts like lily pads on a pond circling senselessly; the painters paint dipping their reds and greens and yellows, poets rhyme their loneliness, musicians starve as always and the novelists miss the mark, but not the pelican, the gull; pelicans dip and dive, rise, shaking shocked half-dead radioactive fish from their beaks; indeed, indeed, the waters wash the rocks with slime; and on wall st. the market staggers like a lost drunk looking for his key; ah, this will be a good one, by God: it will take us back to the sabre-teeth, the winged monkey scrabbling in pits over bits

of helmet, instrument and glass; a lightning crashes across the window and in a million rooms lovers lie entwined and lost and sick as peace; the sky still breaks red and orange for the painters-and for the lovers, flowers open as they always have opened but covered with thin dust of rocket fuel and mushrooms, poison mushrooms; it's a bad time, a dog-sick time-curtain act 3, standing room only, SOLD OUT, SOLD OUT, SOLD OUT again, by god, by somebody and something, by rockets and generals and leaders, by poets, doctors, comedians, by manufacturers of soup and biscuits, Janus-faced hucksters of their own indexterity; I can now see now the coal-slick contaminated fields, a snail or 2, bile, obsidian, a fish or 3 in the shallows, an obloquy of our source and our sight..... has this happened before? is history a circle that catches itself by the tail, a dream, a nightmare, a general's dream, a presidents dream, a dictators dream... can't we awaken? or are the forces of life greater than we are? can't we awaken? must we forever, dear friends, die in our sleep?

Anonymous submission.

The Worst And The Best

in the hospitals and jails it's the worst in madhouses it's the worst in penthouses it's the worst in skid row flophouses it's the worst at poetry readings at rock concerts at benefits for the disabled it's the worst at funerals at weddings it's the worst at parades at skating rinks at sexual orgies it's the worst at midnight at 3 a.m. at 5:45 p.m. it's the worst

These Things

these things that we support most well have nothing to do with up, and we do with them out of boredom or fear or money or cracked intelligence; our circle and our candle of light being small, so small we cannot bear it, we heave out with Idea and lose the Center: all wax without the wick, and we see names that once meant wisdom, like signs into ghost towns, and only the graves are real.

Anonymous submission.

This

self-congratulatory nonsense as the Charles Bukowski

Three Oranges

first time my father overheard me listening to this bit of music he asked me, " what is it?" " it's called Love For Three Oranges, " I informed him. " boy, " he said, " that's getting it cheap." he meant sex. listening to it I always imagined three oranges sitting there, you know how orange they can get, so mightily orange. maybe Prokofiev had meant what my father thought. if so, I preferred it the other way the most horrible thing I could think of was part of me being what ejaculated out of the end of his stupid penis. I will never forgive him for that, his trick that I am stuck with, I find no nobility in parenthood. I say kill the Father before he makes more such as

To The Whore Who Took My Poems

some say we should keep personal remorse from the poem, stay abstract, and there is some reason in this, but jezus; twelve poems gone and I don't keep carbons and you have my paintings too, my best ones; its stifling: are you trying to crush me out like the rest of them? why didn't you take my money? they usually do from the sleeping drunken pants sick in the corner. next time take my left arm or a fifty but not my poems: I'm not Shakespeare but sometime simply there won't be any more, abstract or otherwise; there'll always be mony and whores and drunkards down to the last bomb, but as God said, crossing his legs, I see where I have made plenty of poets but not so very much poetry.

Trapped

don't undress my love you might find a mannequin: don't undress the mannequin you might find my love.

Trashcan Lives

the wind blows hard tonight Charles Bukowski

True

one of Lorca's best lines is, " agony, always agony ..."

True Story

they found him walking along the freeway all red in front he had taken a rusty tin can and cut off his sexual machinery as if to say -- see what you've done to me? you might as well have the rest.

and he put part of him in one pocket and part of him in another and that's how they found him, walking along.

they gave him over to the doctors who tried to sew the parts back on but the parts were quite contented the way they were.

I think sometimes of all of the good ass turned over to the monsters of the world.

maybe it was his protest against this or his protest against everything.

a one man
Freedom March
that never squeezed in between
the concert reviews and the baseball
scores.

God, or somebody, bless him.

www.
Poem
าHunte			Sub Cha
r.com
- The World
d's Po etry / Archi
ve
166

We Ain't Got No Money, Honey, But We Got Rain

call it the greenhouse effect or whatever Charles Bukowski

What A Writer

what i liked about e.e. cummings was that he cut away from the holiness of the word and with charm and gamble gave us lines that sliced through the dung.

how it was needed! how we were withering away in the old tired manner.

of course, then came all the e.e. cummings copyists. they copied him then as the others had copied Keats, Shelly, Swinburne, Byron, et al.

but there was only one e.e. cummings. of course.

one sun.

one moon.

What Can We Do?

at their best, there is gentleness in Humanity. some understanding and, at times, acts of courage but all in all it is a mass, a glob that doesn't have too much. it is like a large animal deep in sleep and almost nothing can awaken it. when activated it's best at brutality, selfishness, unjust judgments, murder.

Whats The Use Of A Title?

They don't make it the beautiful die in flame-suicide pills, rat poison, rope whatever... they rip their arms off, throw themselves out of windows, they pull their eyes out of the sockets, reject love reject hate reject, reject.

they don't make it the beautiful can't endure, they are butterflies they are doves they are sparrows, they don't make it.

one tall shot of flame while the old men play checkers in the park one flame, one good flame while the old men play checkers in the park in the sun.

the beautiful are found in the edge of a room crumpled into spiders and needles and silence and we can never understand why they left, they were so beautiful.

they don't make it, the beautiful die young and leave the ugly to their ugly lives.

lovely and brilliant: life and suicide and death as the old men play checkers in the sun in the park.

Anonymous submission.

Who In The Hell Is Tom Jones?

I was shacked with a

Working Out

Van Gogh cut off his ear gave it to a prostitute who flung it away in extreme disgust.

Writing

often it is the only thing between you and impossibility. no drink, no woman's love, no wealth can match it.

Yes Yes

when God created love he didn't help most when God created dogs He didn't help dogs when God created plants that was average when God created hate we had a standard utility when God created me He created me when God created the monkey He was asleep when He created the giraffe He was drunk when He created narcotics He was high and when He created suicide He was low

when He created you lying in bed He knew what He was doing He was drunk and He was high and He created the mountians and the sea and fire at the same time

He made some mistakes but when He created you lying in bed He came all over His Blessed Universe.

Submitted by .eve.

Young in New Orleans

starving there, sitting around the bars, and at night walking the streets for hours, the moonlight always seemed fake to me, maybe it was, and in the French Quarter I watched the horses and buggies going by, everybody sitting high in the open carriages, the black driver, and in back the man and the woman, usually young and always white. and I was always white. and hardly charmed by the world. New Orleans was a place to hide. I could piss away my life, unmolested. except for the rats. the rats in my dark small room very much resented sharing it with me. they were large and fearless and stared at me with eyes that spoke an unblinking death.

women were beyond me. they saw something depraved. there was one waitress a little older than I, she rather smiled, lingered when she brought my coffee.

that was plenty for me, that was enough.

there was something about that city, though it didn't let me feel guilty that I had no feeling for the things so many others needed. it let me alone.

sitting up in my bed the llights out, hearing the outside sounds, lifting my cheap bottle of wine, letting the warmth of the grape enter me as I heard the rats moving about the room, I preferred them to humans.

being lost, being crazy maybe is not so bad if you can be that way undisturbed.

New Orleans gave me that. nobody ever called my name.

no telephone, no car, no job, no anything.

me and the rats and my youth, one time, that time I knew even through the nothingness, it was a celebration of something not to do but only know.